Practical Assignment: I Am in Charge

1. Choose a new exercise: My new exercise for this week will be rock climbing, as I have tried it once but not done it in a few months. I really enjoyed it and found it challenging strength-wise. It also scares me a little bit with height, but I want to work on that fear and being comfortable bailing on climbs.
2. Stimulus Control: My strategy for this is to plan with my roommate, Mairin, to go rock climbing together so I am motivated to follow through with our plans even if I am unmotivated to workout or move around.
3. Exercise Log:

Date	Exercise(s) completed	Notes
Monday 4/6	Cardio, weightlifting	Stair stepper in the AM, weightlifting at the gym after afternoon classes
Tuesday 4/7	Rock climbing	With Mairin at the ARC
Wednesday 4/8	Cardio	Stair stepper after work in the PM
Thursday 4/9	Rock climbing	With Mairin at the ARC
Friday 4/10	weightlifting	Weightlifting in the afternoon at the gym
Saturday 4/11	Rock climbing	With Mairin at Bloc Garten in the morning
Sunday 4/12	Rest day	Walking outside

Reflection:

The stimulus control I selected was making plans to go rock climbing with my roommate so that I would be motivated to go and stick with our plans even if I was not up for rock climbing. I have done this before with other exercises or plans because I know during and after the activity I will feel happy and satisfied, but sometimes it is hard to get going if there is no plan or commitment. I told Mairin about the assignment as well, and how I needed to make sure I went so she was able to also stick to the plan to help me go each time. I will definitely use this again, as I was able to go rock climbing three times this week and felt it was easy with the set schedule in the beginning of the week. When I am struggling to do my regular exercise or wanting to try something new, I will reach out to my friends who would be interested and make plans with them so I can stay committed to my goals and enjoy working out with company as well.
